

Phase	Phase 1: Booking	Phase 2: Arriving at the airport	Phase 3: Pre-Boarding	Phase 4: First Flight	Phase 5: Waiting for connection	Phase 6: Connecting Flight	Phase 7: Destination
Doing	Both people have booked their flight but do not read the terms and conditions from the airline	Both personas arrive at the airport; one appears to be more worried than the other	Both personas go through the check-in process and then the security	One persona goes through a smooth first flight with no issues and the other persona has their flight delayed	The first persona knows that she has a three hour layover but then she receives a message that the flight has been delayed for an hour and then she receives a message about another delay and now she is not sure when her flight will take-off because the flight keeps changing the reason and delay time. The second persona arrives and discovers that because of the delay in the previous flight, they have missed the next flight but luckily the airline finds the next available flight to his destination.	The first persona finally takes off at 10pm after continuous delays from the airline, now she just wants to arrive and has felt uniformed through out the flight. The second persona just wants to get this destination, he plans to apply for compensation and so he starts searching for the Air Passenger Protection Regulation so that he can apply for it.	The first persona arrives at her destination and search for the website that talks about compensation. She searches online and clicks the link for the website but she finds it difficult finding what she needs so she gives up on reading it. The second persona who knows about the APPR, applies for compensation but gets a message from the airline saying he is not eligible for compensation. Now he is confused about when and how he can be eligible for compensation
Touchpoint	Booking website, Devices, Ticket, Terms and condition	Airport, Transportation to the airport	Aircraft, Check-in counter, Baggage, Security staff, Boarding pass	Aircraft, Cabin crew, Other passengers, Devices, Notification from airlines	Airport, Passengers, Devices, Boarding pass	Aircraft, Cabin crew, Passengers, Voucher	Third party, APPR website, Device
Painpoints	Passengers do not read the terms and conditions provided by the airlines which mentions their rights. Many do not know the document informs them of their rights	There is little to no proactive measure being used in the airport to inform passengers about their rights			Passengers want the truth about why their flight is disrupted and when a delay continues to increase, with no information they start to assume that the airline is lying to them.	Passengers get information from other passengers that may not be accurate which would create an expectation in the minds of other passengers.	Passengers do not understand when they should be eligible for compensation and some passengers struggle to find and understand the APPR hard to understand
Opportunities	Create awareness that passengers rights are also included in the terms and conditions document that the airlines give to passengers	Create awareness by posting posters in the airports with a barcode that would lead to the air passenger rights website	Create awareness by posting posters in the airports with a barcode that would lead to the air passenger rights website	Create awareness by having ads on the in-flight entertainment during the flight	Improve communication and Inform passengers about flight disruptions and the reason.	Create awareness by having ads on the in-flight entertainment during the flight	Make the APPR simple to find and understand for passengers. Help passengers understand when they are eligible for compensation.